

First, peel off the backing paper from the floor tile and lay the paper with the counters printed on it to the tile.

Take care to line the edges up and make sure there aren't any air bubbles under the paper.

Cut the excess tile away and save it – after you have done a few you can make up extra counter strips from the excess pieces.

Next you want to cut out a suitable piece of clear self-adhesive plastic, so you can cover the paper to protect it.

When you stick the clear plastic to the paper, make sure that you smooth it down from one end to the other to ensure there are no air bubbles under the plastic. It is quite forgiving and you can usually smooth out any air bubbles by “wiping” them to the edge with a soft cloth.

After you have the plastic all smooth, cut the counters into strips using the heavy duty cutter.

At this point I prefer to use the “tin snips” to cut the individual counters out, because it is very difficult to cut them out accurately with the knife. You might have better luck than me – in which case you don’t need the tin snips.

When you have finished you should have a set of counters – you should be able to get 60 of them in one of the plastic boxes for business cards.

They are quite heavy, but there are really tough and compact. You should be able to use them over and over again.
